

Gerd Sjogren

Interverbum Technology

Gerd Sjogren is a marketing and sales executive working in the life science, language and educational sectors. Special fields of interest include process development design for services, projects, qualifications and quality control.

Gerd is Director Life Sciences at Animech as well as Director Business Partners and General Manager at Interverbum Technology and Interverbum USA.

Gerd worked for MSD (Merck) as a sales rep, and Draco (Astra-Zeneca) as a Nordic product group manager before joining packaging giant Tetra Pak in Korea as Finance and Administration Manager. During her time in Singapore and Switzerland, Gerd served on the operations board of the Singapore American School and the International School of Lausanne.

After moving to Chicago in 1991, Gerd started Svenska skolan at the Swedish American Museum. She was President of SWEA Chicago 1994-1996. In 1997, Gerd joined the Swedish Trade Council in Chicago for a year as a project manager. For the next ten years, she and husband Bengt ran the Interverbum Group, a leading language service provider in the Nordic region. The European part of the language business was sold to AAC Global, part of the Sanoma Group, in 2008.

Gerd is a Swedish native with an MBA from the Stockholm School of Economics. She's fluent in English, Swedish and French.
